There is only one truth, and only one question

All the most popular innovations have been simple to understand and simple to use; The Dyson vacuum cleaner dispensed with the need for a clumsy bag. Sat-navs have replaced cumbersome map books and text and email have meant that we will never be quite so dependant on the postal service again.

Would your life be enriched if you found your own innovation and ensured that every step you take is one on the road to your personal success? Martin Goodyer thinks so, and he should know. With thousands of hours of one-to-one consultations with clients as diverse as business leaders to troubled teenagers, he's amassed a huge amount of experience and skill in simplifying the art and science of being successful.

Martin's success as a speaker and media presenter continues to grow. He regularly appears as a contributor on radio and as a presenter and expert on popular television shows in the UK and overseas. His aim is to make simple the achievement of success, wealth, happiness and harmony in a world that often celebrates underachievement, encourages poverty, values pain over pleasure and is anything but harmonious.

If your goal is to entertain and inspire your audience to take action, the Martin's the coach you have been looking for.

It's always your show

Martin will create a presentation specifically designed for your audience. His passionate, engaging and stimulating style, powerful messages and professional approach ensure that your event will always be his 'best yet'.

It's not intellect that drives behaviour

Drawing from almost two decades of business experience and another of psychological coaching, Martin knows what it is that motivates us to take action. It's simple; we have to feel like it.

It's all about one truth

There's only one person we can never lie to and that's ourselves; that translates as meaning that every audience member has his or her own truth. Align that truth with the desired message and success is inevitable.

It's all about one question

When a person is clear where they are heading, they need only ever ask if their current step is taking them closer or further away from that ultimate goal.
